

Storyteller

Growing up in the Adirondack foothills town of Greenfield Center, NY, James Bruchac found himself immersed in storytelling, Native culture and the natural world. As the son of award-winning Abenaki author and storyteller Joseph Bruchac, it wasn't long before he was spinning his own tales.

Author & Cultural Educator

An award-winning author and storyteller himself, James has shared his stories at schools, libraries, museums and festivals across the country. Whether telling an interactive animal story to a group of kindergarten students or a monster tale to an older crowd, he keeps listeners on the edge of their seats as well as part of the action.

Tracker & Wilderness Expert

As an animal tracker and wilderness skills instructor, James' love of the outdoors educates and inspires. Whether he's sharing his exciting personal experiences in the wild, his collection of plaster casts of animal tracks, or taking you along during one of his many wilderness camps or adventures, both the young and young at heart will be taken on a journey they will never forget.
